Conference Chair Message

Farooq Ahmed Jam (Ph.D.)

2nd International Conference on “Law, Business, Education and Social Sciences” (LBESS - 2019) serves as platform that aims to help the scholarly community across nations to explore the critical role of multidisciplinary innovations for sustainability and growth of human societies. This conference provides opportunity to the academicians, practitioners, scientists, and scholars from across various disciplines to discuss avenues for interdisciplinary innovations and identify effective ways to address the regional and global challenges faced by our societies. The research ideas and studies that we received for this conference are very promising, unique, and impactful. I believe, these studies have the potential to address key challenges in various sub-domains of social sciences and applied sciences. The scholars attending this conference will certainly find it helpful in refining their own research ideas, finding solutions to basic/applied problems they face, and interacting with other renowned scholars for possible future collaborations.

I am really thankful to our honorable scientific and review committee for spending much of their time in reviewing the papers for this event, selecting the best paper awards, and helping the participants in publishing their research in affiliated journals. Also, special thanks to all the session chairs from industry, academia, and policy-making institutions who volunteered their time and support to make this event a success.

A very special thanks to the great scholars for being here with us as keynote speakers. Their valuable thoughts will surely open the horizon of new research and practice for the conference participants coming from across the globe. I am also thankful to all the participants for being here with us to create an environment of knowledge sharing and learning. We, the scholars of this world, belong to the elite educated class of this society and we owe a lot to return to this society. Let's break all the discriminating barriers and get free from all minor affiliations. Let's contribute even a little or single step to the betterment of society and welfare of humanity to bring prosperity, peace, and harmony in this world. Stay blessed.

Type of LBESS Papers

For this year, LBESS has two types of papers: Empirical Studies and Insight. Research papers meet the needs of researchers and are reviewed on the basis of highest academic standards. The objective of the academic paper is to contribute to the scientific body of knowledge. On the contrary, Insight papers meet the needs of policy makers and professionals and are reviewed on the basis of high practical standards. The objective of the Insight is to identify the real-world problems and how they can be solved with the help of information systems.

Reviewing Criteria

In LBESS, all papers are judged on the same criteria (relevance, significance, originality, validity and clarity). However some criteria differ between the Research papers and Insight papers.

Relevance: Relevance has a great impact on the theme of the conference. The material is relevant and according to the theme of the conference.

Significance: Knowledge in different researches in the conference is related to research papers and insight papers.

Originality: Ideas that are new for the researchers are used in the conference.

Validity: Research papers in the conference are based on theory while the insight papers in the research are based on experimental researches. References are according to content.

Clarity: Papers are according to the format, language is easy and understandable by the audience in the conference.

Spreadsheet Model for training an Artificial Neural Network

Kal Namit<sup>1*</sup>, Max Khojasteh<sup>2</sup>
<sup>1,2</sup> Winston Salem State University, USA

Abstract

---

An artificial neuron network (ANN) is a computational model based on the structure and functions of biological neural networks. Information that flows through the network affects the structure of the ANN because a neural network changes - or learns, in a sense - based on that input and output. It consists of three layers: the input layer, the hidden, and output layers. The learning and memory properties of the neural network resemble the properties of human learning and memory. The learning occurs by adjusting the weights on the arcs in the network so that for a given set of inputs, the network's estimated output value will closely approximate the actual output associated with inputs. The technique known as the back propagation algorithm is often used during the training process to adjust the weights in a neural network. In this paper, we present the spreadsheet backpropagation algorithm to search for the minimum of error function using the method of gradient descent.

Responsive Supply Chain in an Emerging Market

Susita Asree***

Winston Salem State University, South Africa

Abstract

---

The purpose of this study is to investigate the impact of responsive supply chain strategy on strategic collaboration and the firm's innovation performance. This study also investigates the role of strategic collaboration as a mediating construct between responsive supply chain and firm's performance. A web questionnaire survey was used in this work. Structural equation modeling was applied to test proposed hypotheses on the associations between variables. The findings show that a responsive supply chain has a positive impact on strategic supply chain collaboration and a firm's innovation performance. Additionally, the impact of the responsive supply chain on a firm's innovation performance is higher when strategic supply chain collaboration is included as a mediator.

Network Structure and Interdependence of Big Oil Companies and the Regional and Global Energy Equity Sectors

Abstract

---

We examine the spillover, network structure, and dependence characteristics of big oil companies in relation to regional and global energy equity markets. We draw our results through the use of conditional value-at-risk (CoVaR), a spillover index, and time-varying parameter copulas. Big oil supermajors are observed to more largely spillover on the EU energy equity sector than in the US energy equity sector. The big oil supermajor BP is consistent across regional and global energy markets, one of the largest spillovers. The CoVaR analysis shows that in the downside Royal Dutch Shell A most largely spillovers on the US energy equity sector, while Chevron does it on the EU energy sector. The world energy equity sector is most largely spillovered by Exxon Mobile. In the upside Royal Dutch Shell B and Chevron most largely spillover on the US energy equity sector, while the EU and world energy equity sectors are most largely spillovered by Royal Dutch Shell B and BP. Copula results indicate asymmetric dependence between big oil supermajors and the US energy equity sector. Symmetric dependence occurs between big oil supermajors and the EU energy equity sector.

King IV Information Technology Governance: JSE-listed Companies' Compliance

Moolman Anneke***

North-West University, South Africa

Abstract

---

The fourth industrial revolution would not be possible without information technology (IT). Although IT is considered to open a world of opportunities, it is also associated with increased risk due to inter alia unauthorised access and data loss. The King Report on Governance (King) was introduced to place South Africa at the forefront of corporate governance globally and would be incomplete without addressing the governance of IT. Previous studies revealed room for improvement with compliance of both King II and King III IT governance principles. Subsequently, King IV was introduced in 2016, recognising technology and information separately, each with their own risks and opportunities. King IV also attempts to force the management of companies to focus their minds on governance and not consider it as mindless compliance. The objective of this study is, therefore, to determine the extent to which King IV has encouraged improved compliance with the technology and information governance principle in the Johannesburg Stock Exchange (JSE) listed companies. As JSE-listed entities are required to comply with King IV, a documentary review on the most recent integrated, corporate governance, and/or similar reports of the top 40 JSE-listed companies was performed to assess compliance of the King IV technology and information governance principle. Findings suggest that King IV substantially improved compliance with its technology and information governance principle, although improved disclosure is necessary. This study is beneficial to the Institute of Directors in South Africa (IODSA) and the JSE to measure current compliance of JSE-listed companies with technology and information governance principles. The study also benefits international governance framework setters by highlighting that companies may be more willing to disclose limited recommendations as opposed to mindlessly stating compliance with various rules.

Investing the use of Debt Finance in Merger and Acquisitions by Multinational Entities as a Tax Avoidance Strategy

Jacobs Lerike<sup>1*</sup>, Swanepoel Thys<sup>2</sup>
<sup>1,2</sup>North-West University, South Africa

Abstract

---

Multinational entities (MNEs) have grown their global footprint rapidly over the past decades. In many instances, it is not because of organic growth but due to mergers and acquisitions (M&As). M&As form an important part of the corporate finance landscape. The literature emphasizes a number of reasons why M&As are part of the growth strategies of MNEs. Two reasons for undertaking an M&A are the potential tax benefits as well as the reduction of finance charges available to the acquiring MNE. The question could be asked; is the use of debt finance in M&A transactions tax avoidance strategy? The aim of the study is to determine the potential tax benefit of the acquiring MNE if the debt is used to finance the M&A of the target entity. The annual financial statements of the best 15 M&As of 2017 were used, based on a report available from Nasdaq. Evidence of tax avoidance strategies related to debt finance of M&As is clearly visible in the annual financial statements. To determine the tax benefit effect of the 14 M&A entities, the annual financial statements of 2016, 2017, and 2018 were reviewed and analysed. Document analysis was used to analyse the relevant data received, using a Pearson regression coefficient to determine the significance of debt finance on tax liability. The study proposes that MNEs use debt finance of M&As as a tax benefit and provides some evidence to suggest that managers, directors, and shareholders should consider debt financing as an option in M&As. The study could potentially help stakeholders decide on whether or not an M&A of a target entity will create sustainable wealth and reduce the tax liability of the acquiring MNE.

Factors Affecting the Entry and Exit of Social Entrepreneur: Understanding through the Lens of RBV

Anita Sharma*

Indian Institute of Management, India

Abstract

---

Social entrepreneurship is emerging as an area for academic inquiry. The social entrepreneurial process is quite different from that of commercial entrepreneurs. Hence, this paper conceptually delineates the reasons to 'enter' and intentions to 'exit' a social entrepreneurial venture. The coherent framework explains that in the serendipitous entry, social entrepreneurs a priori do not focus on resources' availability, while in intentional entry, resources play a crucial role. On the other hand, intentions to exit a social entrepreneurial venture are dependent on resource scarcity, team cohesiveness, and alignment between entrepreneurs' goals and ventures growth strategies. Propositions related to resource requirements during entry and exit in the social entrepreneurial process are offered, which shapes the future research directions.

The Impact of Health and Safety Management on Employees' Performance in the Ghana Immigration Service, Headquarters - Accra

Emmanuel Okyere Darko***
Ghana Baptist University College, Ghana

Abstract

---

Recent accidents occurring in most companies in Ghana have been a source of worry to everyone. Most employers fail to put in place adequate health measures in place at their workplace to safeguard not only the employees and management but also clients and other stakeholders who have some kind of interest in the company or situation. Ineffective occupational health and safety policy have a negative effect on the organization as well as the workforce. The Labour Act 2003, Act 651 of the Republic of Ghana, section 118(1) states that "it is the duty of an employer to ensure that every worker employed by him/her works under satisfactory, safe and healthy conditions". There is no doubt that the human resource that an organization has is one of its adaptable resources. Therefore, effective and efficient use of the human resource will translate into the overall effectiveness and efficiency of the organization. In view of the International Labour Organization (1959), the employer has the responsibility of protecting employees from all health hazards that may pose threat to their safety and healthy living. The purpose of the study was to assess the impact of the occupational health and safety practices on employees' job performance at the Ghana Immigration Service. The officers, administrators, technicians, etc. in the departments and units of the service formed the population of the study. One hundred and twenty respondents formed the sample size of the study. Data was collected through a questionnaire and observation. It was found out that the current occupational health and safety practices at the service were inadequate. Staff commitment and compliance with health and safety rules were also low. It was recommended that management of the service should constitute a safety committee, maintain regular monitoring, inspection and evaluation, and conduct reviews for improvement.

Taxation on Expatriates: A Comparative Study

Dahms Joani***

North-West University, South Africa

Abstract

---

As from 1 March 2020, a large number of South African (SA) expatriates (expats) being employed abroad and whose annual income exceeds $73 855 will be affected by an amendment in expat taxation (tax) legislation. From the mentioned date, expats will be liable for tax ranging up to 45% of their foreign remuneration. To facilitate tax for expats generally, the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) has introduced the Common Reporting Standard (CRS) in 2014. Through this Standard, global authorities attain information from their financial institutions and exchange it with other authorities. More than a hundred countries are already participating in this global initiative to enhance the transparency of international tax-related information. However, it has been established that currently, not all SA individuals working abroad, declare all their foreign income to the South African Revenue Services (SARS). This comparative research used a critical review and an exploratory methodology to investigate how the US and UK implement their expat tax laws, and more specifically, how these legal frameworks affect expats. This study aimed to determine the tax position of expats on the amended SA tax legislation to be implemented in 2020. The results of this study show that SARS can consider increasing the annual exclusion of $73 855 and introduce a possible foreign housing exclusion to lessen the tax burden on SA expats. The administrative burden on tax authorities can also be reduced if payroll relief is applied. Furthermore, it was established that the SA expats will be carrying the largest tax burden compared to the US and UK. This study may benefit expats, employers and tax authorities by clarifying the tax position of expats in light of the amended tax legislation.

Rainwater Harvesting and its Impact on the Access Component of the Water Poverty Index

Charles Van Der Vyver***
North-West University, South Africa

Abstract

---

The aim of this research is to quantify the impact that the implementation of rainwater harvesting will have on improving access to water as part of the water poverty index. It focuses on two municipalities in South Africa, which as a country is already classified as water-stressed. The research is a quantitative study that makes use of secondary data that was collected at a high assurance level to determine the possible costs involved. It was found that rainwater harvesting is definitely a viable option in the chosen area, albeit at a fairly significant cost, which will definitely be too high for the municipalities in question to carry. If the capital were to become available, it would have a small influence on the water poverty index, but the difference it will make to the quality of life of the residents in the municipalities might prove unmeasurable. Future research should continue to focus on refining the index itself, and on exploring new possibilities and scenarios for the implementation of the index.

Quantifying the Impact on Communication of a Change in Management Structure of a University Incubator

<sup>1,2</sup> North-West University, South Africa

Abstract

---

This research paper aims to quantify the impact on the communication model of a university incubator, due to restructuring and change in the management structure. Participants included staff members of a university incubator, at a well-known South African University. A qualitative research approach was used, along with semi-structured interviews due to its flexible nature, offering the researcher the opportunity to ask open-ended questions, but also presents the researcher with the focus of a structured ethnographic study. Secondly, qualitative content analysis was used, assisting the researcher in analysing written, verbal, and visual communication on the subject matter in order to gain a better understanding of university incubators and communication models. Not only did the researcher observe the changes within the university incubator, but was also a participant, due to the nature of the researchers work. The participant-observer method was, therefore included as a research method. The changes in communication model were due to the restructuring that took place within the university, the impact of the restructuring on the university incubator's communication model was unplanned and had significant changes on the communication model. The current communication model combined with communication models from literature to develop the best possible communication model for the current situation. Even though the changes to the communication model was for the better, the current communication model of the university incubator still presents the possibility for expansion and improvement.

Assessment in Special Education: Improving Professionals' Skills Using Video Footage

Abstract

---

Communication and social skills are key areas of development which impact on both the academic and social lives of children. However, these areas can be particularly challenging for children with physical disabilities who may have fewer opportunities to meet socially, possibly compromising their quality of life. The aim of this pilot study was to investigate the value of video analysis on improving observation skills for professionals in special education. A qualitative, mixed method case study approach was taken due to the uniqueness of the children who are non-verbal and have complex physical disabilities. Methods included the use of the MBC checklist (MBC; Efstratopoulou, Jansen, & Simons, 2012), video footage, and semi-structured interviews. The sample consisted of five educational practitioners and two non-verbal children with physical disabilities from a special school in the UK. The practitioners were asked to rate the children's behaviour (social cluster) by completing the MBC. The importance of assessing children with physical disabilities using video footage was evaluated during the semi-structured interviews when the practitioners expressed how they saw a different child and how their observational skills were sharper. Ways that research findings can be used to help professionals to design interventions in order to improve social and communication skill for students with multiple physical disabilities will be discussed.

Consumer Protection and China's Sharing Economy

Peng Xu*

Zhejiang Police College, China

Abstract

---

The sharing economy is providing consumers with more affordable, more convenient access to shared goods and services. However, the business model of sharing economy has posed challenges for both consumers and regulators. The Chinese central government has drafted policies to promote the sharing economy while protecting consumers rights. Due to the lack of effective exchange of information and ambiguity in regulatory requirements, it is not easy to achieve the goal of consumer protection in the sharing economy. China needs to take a more positive and specific role in guiding policies towards a sustainable sharing economy for the long-term.

A Meta-Analysis of Learning Management Models Affecting Achievements among Undergraduate Students

Thanin Ratanaolarn***

King Mongkut's Institute of Technology, Ladkrabang, Thailand

Abstract

---

In Thailand, there are many types of research about the learning management models affecting learning achievement among undergraduate students. Those research results are either the harmony or the conflict. Most of them have not yet reached the final solution. The researches cannot be concluded about the best learning management model. Therefore, this research aims to synthesize the researches about the learning management models affecting achievements among undergraduate students by meta-analysis. The researchers used in this study were 47 papers published from 2009 to 2018 in Thailand. The synthesis findings showed that 1) the learning objective emphasized developing cognitive domains in the highest proportion. The teaching method emphasized the roles of students, and most learning management media will be self-learning media. Most tools used in measurement and evaluation in the cognitive domain were tested, in the affective domain were ethic scale, and in the psychomotor domain were a practical test. 2) The analysis of effect size to find the best learning management models affecting learning achievement among undergraduate students found that learning objectives emphasized the integration of cognitive domain, affective domain, and psychomotor domain. The constructivism was used as a base for teaching model. In addition, the teaching method will emphasize the role of students and use learning management media in the type of self-learning media. Measurement and evaluation of achievements will use authentic assessment and various tools. Therefore, this study is beneficial for teachers in designing learning management models among undergraduate students effectively.
